PARDON GRANTED "SPIDER" MURPHY

After Serving Twenty Years in Rhode Island State Prison He Is a Free Man—Sentenced For Life But Governor Released Him—Will Go to Chicago.

Governor Pothier Friday sent to the Rhode Island senate pardons for Allen W. Dorsey and Dennis alias "Spider" Murphy, formerly of Norwich, both serving life sentences for murder. The pardons were confirmed by the senate at 5 o'clock Friday night. They ceased to be prisoners at the moment the senate gave its approval to the pardons.
Both Dorsey and Murphy have been behind the bars for over 20 years, and the pardons of which they were convicted, while the topic of conversation for a long period at the time they occurred, have not been brought to public attention in several years.

Murphy Sentenced in '89.
The murder for which Dennis, alias "Spider" Murphy, was incarcerated occurred in the summer of 1889, when the community was shocked by the death of Waterman Irons, a merchant 82 years old, who was in good mental and physical condition for a man of his advanced age, says the Providence Journal. On the afternoon of August 24, 1889, two young men entered his leather shop on High, now Westminster street, to a small building opposite Dean street, and asked to examine a piece of fine leather. He went to the little back room to get the leather, and there the two intruders attacked him, one clutching him by the throat, while the other attempted to take the wallet from his pocket.
Mr. Irons made such a fight that he was thrown to the floor one of the assailants falling upon him. In the fall one of Mr. Irons' ribs was fractured and it punctured his intestines, the contents of which caused peritonitis, from which he died the following day.
Murphy's alleged companion in the killing of Mr. Irons was "Peter" Hackett, a criminal who was formerly a frequent prisoner. Murphy was speedily captured, but his companion, Hackett, made his escape. Although the authorities sought for him far and wide they were never able to find a trace of him.

Spider Murphy was only about 19 years old when he came to this city and fell into bad company, and was implicated in his participation in the murder case, which was one of the most sensational and brutal in the city's criminal records. He was sentenced to spend the remainder of his life in prison on July 2, 1889.
Murphy after his imprisonment gave the prison authorities considerable trouble, and was considered an incor-rectable by the prison officials. In the early '90s, when "Gentleman" George Ellwood made an attempt to break jail, Murphy was his companion.

Murphy Covers.
The latter had been selected by Ellwood because of the reputation Murphy had been given as being a desper-ado. Murphy, however, was nothing but a 19 year old country youth, who had never been implicated in any crime previous to his arrest for the Irons murder.
Ellwood had made the most desperate attempt to escape ever recorded at the Rhode Island state prison. Just as the two prisoners reached the door leading from the prison yard, Ellwood up in his fight the result would have been different.
A number of attempts have been made to secure pardons for both Murphy and Dorsey, but they have all failed by the chief executive.
Murphy and Dorsey became free men at 12:15 Saturday afternoon, and were at their studios at North Main street, on Saturday afternoon, between the house of three and five o'clock.

Murphy Grateful.
"Tell everybody, and especially tell those who have secured my freedom, that I am grateful. My gratitude to them all is too deep for me to tell you."

Junior Members of the Monday and Tuesday Classes Acquire Themselves Admirably.
With the closing of their monthly lessons, the junior members of the Monday and Tuesday classes composed the piano pupils taught by Miss Lema C. Boudreau, gave a musical and social at her studio at North Main street, on Saturday afternoon, between the house of three and five o'clock.
The studio was adorned with potted plants and presented an inviting scene to the pupils assembled for the recital. Present with the pupils at the same were their invited guests. The four children who had attained the highest average in their respective classes were selected by their associates to give the same. It was an impromptu affair, and thoroughly enjoyed by those present.
The following programme was rendered:
1. Overture, William Tell, Verdi.

NEW CASES.
Of the thirteen new cases, two are defendants' appeal in William B. Colt vs. Mahan, and the other two are others' and defendants' appeal in Thomas Howe vs. George C. Raymond and others.
Nathan M. Church of Montville, plaintiff in his suit against Edward Spicer of Groton for $15,000 damages for injuries received by Mr. Church when struck by a train driven by Mr. Spicer in Groton in 1909, brings appeal from the finding of the superior court for the defendant with costs.
Nathan Menhaden Oil & Guano Co., defendants against James V. Luce, in a suit brought by Luce to determine the possession of a tract of land in East Lyme, takes appeal from the court judgment, which gave Luce the ownership of the land in question.
Philip H. Allen of New London, who sued the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. Co. for $10,000 damages for injuries received by being hit by a train and knocked off the car on Memorial day, 1907, on the New London railroad, while he was riding on the running board of an open car. He got a verdict of $5,000, which was later set aside and a new trial ordered. From this the plaintiff appeals.

First on the continued list is the case of Marion, admr., vs. the Connecticut company, in which the court directed judgment for the defendant on trial of the case in the superior court. The plaintiff appealed and the court, alleging the court to be in error in issuing such direction to the jury. Frederick W. Marion, administrator of the estate of Alpha E. Burdick, deceased, of Montville, sued the Connecticut company for $5,000 damages, the plaintiff alleging that Burdick was put off one of the cars of the defendant company at Hempstead on the night of April 14, 1909, and thrown into the highway near the track so that he was struck by a car coming in the opposite direction. He died of a fractured skull soon afterwards, being in a helpless condition. It is admitted, through sickness or intoxication, when he was put off the car.
In the case of Thomas Caffrey vs. Groton & Stonington Street Railway Co., the defendant takes appeal from the decision of Judge Greene, who denied their motion to set aside the verdict and for a new trial, and the plaintiff had secured a verdict for $2,500.00, after trial of the case, in which Mr. Caffrey sued the company for a bill of $500 in putting up a pole line in November, 1909.

Also Get Clothing.
Each man received a cash dividend of $20, their share of the proceeds accrued from the sale of shirts made in the prison. Each also received $5 from the state, which, with new street apparel, is presented to them.
The two prisoners shook hands with all in the party. They sat with W. Wheatland in the rear seat of Warden C. C. Tucker's auto and with Mr. McCourt in the front seat. The chauffeur left the prison yard waving adieu between smiles and tears.
The departure marked an epoch in the history of the prison. They were the first men who, after a long time in the prison to be liberated, and their liberation was further an interesting one because it was of a dual nature.
Street clothes, entire outfits, were purchased for the two men in a store in Providence Saturday morning, and when the warden brought them back to the prison, they were changed into the new street clothes. They were then escorted to the prison yard, where they were met by a large number of their friends, who were waiting to see them.

faith in Christ. It is as easy for us as it was for Paul. Our value as Christians in this world depends upon how closely we live to God's way. Though we think differently on many things yet, each in his own church, in his own way, may live closer to God and thus we all stand together as His disciples.
Following prayer by A. A. Browning and other R. R. Graham spoke briefly on the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, emphasizing the fact that it is the business of the church to bring about social righteousness. In the past, he said, the church has held aloof from the burning social questions. The Forward Movement will bring the church to look more closely at the human conditions that de-people and take a more active part against the prevalent social evils.
I. B. Stanton spoke of the possibilities for good work in the city and mentioned the need of bringing the young man into the work and giving him a chance to express himself. We must have a campaign in the churches for converting the young men. Secretary F. R. Starkey spoke of the great good which has been accomplished by the movement all over the country, and interesting remarks were given by Rev. H. E. Ewing and Rev. W. W. Coleman. The meeting was concluded with prayer by Rev. Mr. Wright.

CASES TO BE HEARD
IN SUPREME COURT.
Matters of Much Importance in This End of the State—Session Opens on Tuesday.
When the supreme court of errors comes in here on Tuesday, April 30, for the April term, it will have before it the longest docket for this court ever compiled, a total of 19 cases, of which six are continued and thirteen are new.
